SUBJECT: Renewal of Council of Urban Boards of Education Membership

Dear CUBE Member,

Thank you for your ongoing participation in CUBE programming. Your commitment contributes to the success of NSBA's program that supports urban school boards. As you renew your participation this year, I have exciting news to share about changes that will bring more value to your district.

First, NSBA/CUBE continues to advocate for excellence and equity in public education. We realize in order to build a strong team, we must develop an important partnership between school districts and state school boards associations. CUBE will continue to:

- Cultivate the best and brightest minds in urban school board leadership;
- Provide networking and professional development;
- Create relevant podcasts, bi-weekly newsletters, and provide an information-packed publication, Urban Advocate;
- Lead compassionately and intelligently; and
- Collaborate with colleagues and communities in order to foster effective leadership while focusing on challenges in urban education.

In addition, included in your membership is an enhanced service package that will help your district stay on the leading edge of American public education. In the coming year, we'll be working in partnership with state school boards associations to provide you with new "National Connection" resources such as:

- Federal Insider: This resource package includes federal policy analysis and reports on major actions of Congress and federal agencies, as well as implementation guidance that can save your district time and money in complying with mandates. In addition, you'll receive details of federal legal cases that will impact the way your district operates, as well as regular updates on school law issues across the country.
- The Public Engagement Toolkit: Practical tools you can use to build public understanding and engagement around major educational issues, to help you create the public and community support your district needs for success.
- The School Board Leadership Resource Center and CPE Briefing Room: These two resources bring you school improvement research, best practices and examples from high-performing school systems, and expert guidance that can help your school board set a course for improving student achievement and district excellence.

- Money-Saving Resources such as a guide to the latest education grants and funding opportunities, as well as discounts on other NSBA publications and Annual Conference registration fees.
- Plus timely reports that can help you understand national trends and issues related to public education leadership through NSBA's award-winning magazine, American School Board Journal.

Finally, taking part in CUBE's programming means more than connecting to high-quality national resources and analysis. Your participation helps to create a strong network of school boards, state school boards associations, and a national organization that, together, must stand up and speak out for public education. You are helping to advance a national advocacy agenda to turn back escalating pressures on public education and the accompanying reduction of school board authority.

As state and federal levels of government assert an ever-greater role in education policymaking, NSBA is seeking to promote local school governance in new and more visible ways. You can learn more about our advocacy agenda online www.nsba.org/newsba. Quite simply, we cannot do it without your support and involvement.

Thank you for your district's ongoing participation CUBE. If you have questions about the program or your renewal, please contact me at 703-838-6742, or dkeys@nsba.org.

Sincerely,

Deborah L. Keys
Director, NSBA Council of Urban Boards of Education
