The Jordan Fundamentals Program recognizes outstanding teaching and instructional creativity in public secondary schools that serve economically disadvantaged students. The program provides up to $2,500 per project to support the development of outstanding original lesson plans or thematic units that demonstrate high student expectations. Applications are accepted from teachers and paraprofessionals who work with students in grades six to twelve in schools where at least 40% of the student population are eligible for the free or reduced lunch program.
The funding announcement was disseminated to all secondary schools and centers and posted on the Grants Administration and Government Programs Department website. A technical assistance workshop was conducted by the Grants Administration and Government Programs Department on May 8, 2003 to review the application and answer questions about proposal development. Two applications are being submitted for a total request of $4,922 in grant funds. Schools submitting applications are H.D.

and study a butterfly garden to develop science, mathematics, and language arts skills and providing LEP students with science-based field experiences and projects that will build students' scientific background
